

Part Three

Attunement and Group Service

An Interview with Lani Calkin

The third in a three-part series of an interview with Lani Calkin, conducted by Jenny Spiers, as research for her thesis 'The Shift in Consciousness in New Zealanders'.

Lani Calkin of Mt Eden, Auckland works with individuals and groups to help them connect and develop their spiritual energy.

JS: There is also a lot of focus on small group gatherings, whether it be for meditations or attunements of whatever. What is the importance of group attunements as opposed to individual attunements and how do they differ?

LC: Group attunement is important in this present time because it teaches us to unite one with another, with a common purpose and if we recognise that the purpose is to become an instrument or channel for the higher energy to come through, it is amplified. What comes through one is expanded and increased when it comes through two or more in a group together and it has a wider influence in the community.

In groups when we are attuning together and discussing higher concepts together, we are actually creating centres of light. At one time we used to think we should go to a particular place or building which was called a "centre" but we ourselves are the centre and we must recognise this. We are that centre of peace when we are aligned with our higher selves and higher consciousness and allowing that higher energy to come through into the earth place.

I believe part of our purpose here is to become aware of our abilities and our capabilities of channelling this energy Groups gathering together can work to allow this to be established. An individual attuning creates a light, but that light is so much greater in a group attunement. All over the planet, groups coming together create an energy, or a light, and because this is happening all around the world, every 24 hours, those light centres are established by the groups and there are connections between each.

It is like seeing a grid of light or energy across the planet and the people are serving the purpose of being the anchor points and channels for the higher energy to come through.

They are transformers of the higher energy into the earth plane and into human consciousness.

JS: It sounds to me what you are describing could be seen as a very necessary step in the evolution of both the human species and the earth planet.

LC: Yes, I believe it is. I believe part of our purpose here is to become aware of our abilities and our capabilities of channelling this energy.

I don't fully understand the final outcome, or fully understand the process to describe it in detail, but I know that every individual on the planet is charged with the responsibility of recognising our source, and of recognising that we must open to that, be guided by it and let its influence come into our life.

When we speak about universal consciousness and universal oneness, I therefore cannot limit it just to this planet, it must be part of the whole solar system and beyond.

It seems to me that the earth is playing a very important part at this time and therefore humanity is playing an important role in a great scheme, which perhaps is beyond our comprehension.

There is a great drive in the individuals who are becoming aware of
